CRIMINAL RESPONSIBILITY REPORT WRITING GUIDELINES

Introduction:

This checklist is designed as a guideline for completing Criminal Responsibility Evaluations pursuant to M.G.L. chapter 123 §15(b). It is best used as a reference point for checking your work to determine whether you have included the necessary elements in your report

IDEN	TIFYING INFORMATION
Na	ime	Date of Birth
	ender	Age at Evaluation
Re	ferring Court	Charge(s)
Da	ite(s) of Alleged Offense(s)	Date of Arrest ace of Evaluation (if applicable) which led to this court-order	red evaluation
Ty	pe(s) of Evaluation (i.e., CST, CR, Aid in Sentencing, etc.)
Sta	atute/Legal Authority for Evaluation
Pla	ace and Date of Admission (if inpatient 15B)
Bri	ief (typically one sentence) description of what the defendan	t is alleged to have done
LEG	AL CRITERIA - McHoul- verbatim
WAR	NING OF LIMITS OF CONFIDENTIALITY When wri	ting this portion of the ation, write what you actually gave as a warning to this defer
Did y	ou indicate that you informed the defendant
	About your professional status as a court-ordered examine	r
	That you are performing a court-ordered evaluation
	That the evaluation was ordered to assist in the Court's det	termination of the defendant's mental state at the time(s) of the alleged offense(s)
	That the evaluation was ordered to assist in the Court's det	termination of the defendant's
	need for mental health treatment
	That the information would be revealed to the Court in the	form of a report and possibly testimony and in that sense will not be confidential That the defendant could refuse to participate in the intervi would still be providing a report to the Court based on you	r observations and other sources of information
	That the defendant could refuse to answer questions selection	ively
	That the defendant could stop the interview at any time
Did y	ou indicate that You attempted to briefly assess the defendant's understand questions (or requests to paraphrase) and include examples	s of his/her responses which suggest(s) their understanding or confusion You attempted to educate the defendant about the warning adequately understand it) and briefly describe your efforts
	You attempted to reassess the defendant's understanding o (or requests to paraphrase) and include examples of his/her	r responses which suggest(s)
	their understanding or confusion
	Your impression of whether or not the defendant adequate	ly understood the warning

SOUR	CES OF INFORMATION
	Indicate dates and duration of all interviews with the defendant Indicate date(s) of contact (or attempts to contact) defendant's attorney
	For all others interviewed, indicate names, dates of contact and relation to the defendant For family members of the defendant, indicate they were informed that information shared which is relevant to the evaluation will be reported to the Court Identify all records that you reviewed for the purpose of this evaluation
	The first section of the first
RELE	VANT HISTORY
It is in	portant to organize this section carefully, so that it is "reader friendly." Usually a chrono	logical account of the person's life works well; in some cases it might be better to break me subsections such as "History of Substance Use" or "Mental Health History." Information provided is both relevant and sufficient to support your subsequent opinions regarding the presence or absence of mental illness, your diagnostic impression, and opinions such as likeliness of serious harm to self or others by reason of mental illness. In addition, be sure to keep in mind the purpose of the report, and do not include information that is unnecessary, potentially prejudicial, etc.
	Includes a brief description of any significant points regarding the defendant's history of family socialization and his/her personality development Includes a history of social adaptations to school, work, peer relations, marriage, etc.
	Includes any history of past mental difficulties, treatment, and response to treatment or report of no such history
	History of suicidal ideation/attempts or no such history
	Includes any history of substance abuse or report of no such history Includes any history of criminal justice involvement or report of no such history Includes any history of violence/threats toward others and/or self or report of no such history
	Includes relevant medical history
	Includes results of any special diagnostic evaluations (if applicable) Multiple sources of information were sought to corroborate above histories and any significant discrepancies or single source information, which cannot be corroborated are noted.
	If specific interviewees (i.e., defendant, a family member, etc.) are thought to be unreliable informants, this is pointed out at the beginning of this section wind in the second control of the second sec
CIRC	UMSTANCES OF REFERRAL
	Includes a summary description of the observations made by others (attorneys, clinicians, court-personnel, family members, etc.) which elicited or are relevant to the referral for this court-ordered evaluation If a Section 15(a) evaluation was conducted, the evaluator, date of evaluation, and observations and inferences relevant to this court-ordered evaluation are included COURSE OF HOSPITALIZATION (if hospitalized during current evaluation)
	A summary of the course of the defendant's current hospitalization (particularly important if you need to rule in/out malingering)

Responsiveness to treatment and interactions/relationship with treatment providers are noted Includes a description of current treatment (including medication regimen) Includes a description of the defendant's participation/compliance with treatment CURRENT MENTAL FUNCTIONING Thoroughly describe the defendant's mental status using specific behavioral examples versus clinical jargon whenever possible. If jargon is used, it is defined. The description of mental functioning should comment on the following: Appearance Behavior Relatedness Affect Mood Quality of communications Thought processes Perception (hallucinations) Thought content (evidence of paranoia, delusional ideation) Presence/absence of suicidal/homicidal ideation or intention Cognitive factors (orientation, attention, concentration, memory, intellectual functioning) If jargon was used, it was defined Police Report of the Alleged Offense: The police report may be paraphrased, quoted in part or quoted in its entirety. The decision should be made keeping in mind the need for clarity, readability, and relevance. If the report is paraphrased, you should take care not to read between the lines. When the defendant is quoted verbatim in the police report it is usually a good idea to include this quote.
Defendant's Version of the Alleged Offense: As opposed to using one long quote, this section is best written by combining paraphrasing of the defendant's account, with short quotations of the defendant's actual words (when they are of special importance) and descriptions of questions that you posed (which led to significant revelations by the defendant).
The defendant's account of the events and circumstances leading up to and including the alleged offense and following the alleged offense (if relevant). This may include relevant events and behaviors, which occurred in the defendant's life during the previous week or other relevant time frame The defendant's report of his/her actions, thoughts and state of mind prior to, during and immediately following the alleged offense
The defendant's report of any substance use prior to the alleged offense. The defendant's report of any relationship with the alleged victim, the alleged victim's actions prior to and during the alleged offense and his/her interactions with the defendant If relevant the defendant's current understanding of the import of his/her actions on the date in question and his/her current attitude toward those actions (although these may have no probative relationship to his/her criminal responsibility)
Note: Inferences or opinions regarding the defendant's criminal responsibility are not offered until the "Clinical Impressions Regarding CR" section.	Deleted: ¶

Additional Information Related to the Alleged Offense: Reports of others persons' accounts of the events surrounding the alleged offense (when relevant) and/or direct observations of the defendant are included. Additional information related to the defendant's mental condition in the hours or days prior to, during and immediately after the alleged offense is included. This information focuses on descriptions of the defendant's behavior (any problem-solving behavior, exercise of volitional control, irrational behavior, substance use, efforts to conceal actions, etc.) on that date and other observations which allow for inferences about the defendant's state of mind at the time of the alleged crime (this may also include data from the 15a report).
CLINICAL IMPRESSIONS REGARDING CRIMINAL RESPONSIBILITY
Inferences and opinions regarding CR do not appear prior to this section. This section interprets the information from the previous sections, with regard to its relevance for the question of the defendant's criminal responsibility for the alleged offense(s). Opinions and supporting data and rationales are offered regarding the following:
Whether or not the defendant had a mental illness or defect at the time of the alleged offense, and Whether his or her ability to appreciate the illegal (wrongful) nature of what he/she was doing ("cognitive prong") was significantly impaired due to a mental illness or defect Whether his or her ability to conform his or her conduct (exercise self control) to the requirements of the law ("volitional prong") was significantly impaired due to a mental illness or defect Whether there's evidence that intoxication of any kind significantly impacted the defendant's actions at the time of the alleged offense For each of these opinions, supporting data are identified from the earlier sections and the inferences (logical connections) linking these data to your opinions are explained Rather than offering an ultimate opinion regarding CR ("the defendant is/is not CR")or using the exact language of the statute ("lacked substantial capacity"), the examiner's opinions regarding the cognitive and volitional prongs are stated in the following form -
"the symptoms of the defendant's (mental illness/mental defect) (did/did not) significantly impair his/her capacity to (appreciate the wrongfulness of his or her actions/conform his or her conduct to the requirements of the law) at the time of the alleged offense"
If the examiner cannot reasonably form a confident opinion about one or more of the three matters noted above, the reasons for this inability are explained (i.e., the defendant's unwillingness/inability to provide a comprehensible account of his/her behavior, the absence of corollary accounts of the defendant's actions and mental state at that time, the inherent difficulty in forming retrospective assessments about complex clinical material, etc.)

CLINICAL IMPRESSIONS REGARDING NEED FOR CARE AND TREATMENT

not due to mental illness (e.g., substance abuse, personality disorder).

Note: In this section it is important that you make clear to the court your clinical opinion on the defendant's need for hospitalization and clinical care and treatment. Other recommendations can be made consistent with the following guidelines:

Wh Wh Wh If s The reas If re you Con disp	and supporting data and rationales are offered regarding: whether the person is mentally ill (as defined by state regulation) or mentally retarded whether the person requires inpatient psychiatric hospitalization of whether the person requires strict security extractionale for these recommendations should be explicitly articulated, including soning around likelihood of serious harm to self/others ecommendations for treatment other than inpatient hospitalization are offered, then a should include specifics about where that treatment can be obtained commendations (both for hospitalization and community treatment) should be esistent with the person's legal status (e.g., recommendations for immediate position upon return to court versus recommendations for when the case will be mately adjudicated.)
the legal or your recom	ses it is desirable to offer the court more than one dispositional option, depending on atcome of the case. However, offering too long of a laundry list, without clarifying mendation may be confusing to the court. In choosing what to include in this section, ng guidelines are recommended:
forensic op Not Guilty	d first make clear to the court your specific recommendations consistent with your pinion (e.g., if you are recommending that the defendant meets criteria for being found by Reason of Insanity and requires hospitalization, then you should recommend ervation pursuant to §16(a)).	◆	Formatted: Bullets and Numbering hospitaliza (e.g., if yo Reason of hospitalize	y advisable to offer the court alternative dispositional recommendations for tion if the court finds contrary to your recommendations about criminal responsibility u are recommending that the defendant meets criteria for being found Not Guilty by Insanity, you can include a recommendation for how the defendant could be d if the court nevertheless adjudicates him/her criminally responsible – such as 8(a), §12(e), §§7&8).	4	Formatted: Bullets and Numbering about need then add th	visable to offer dispositional recommendations that conflict with your clinical opinion for hospitalization - e.g., if you recommend inpatient commitment, it is not helpful to at if the court chooses to release the defendant then outpatient services may be a local community mental center.		Formatted: Bullets and Numbering
In this sect	ion, risk of harm to self and others should be addressed even if you think that this is	4	Formatted: Bullets and Numbering

Note: There are situations where the data do not suggest that the defendant poses a risk of harm to self or others but you think that the person could nevertheless benefit from treatment. In making recommendations in such cases, please be aware that some courts will impose this treatment as a condition of probation. Therefore, when making such recommendations, you should take into account the advantages and disadvantages of such enforced treatment.