“Studying Medication Use in Pregnancy: Challenges and Opportunities”

Presented by: Mollie Wood, MPH, PhD
Postdoctoral Research Fellow
University of Oslo
Harvard T.H. Chan School of Public Health

This talk uses examples from the medications in pregnancy literature to frame recent simulation studies on (1) the performance of the propensity score under different scenarios of exposure misclassification and (2) using sibling study designs to address unmeasured confounding assumptions in causal mediation analysis.

Lunch will be provided: Please RVSP to Kelley.Baron@umassmed.edu
