UMass Medical School, located in Worcester (Central Massachusetts), is a 67-acre integrated health science facility and freestanding university-based academic health science campus that includes the School of Medicine (SOM), Graduate School of Biomedical Science (GSBS), and Graduate School of Nursing (GSN), as well as UMass Memorial Health Care, the largest not-for-profit health care delivery system in central Massachusetts.

Nursing Faculty Position in Graduate Entry Pathway (GEP) Program:

Full-Time (12 months)

The Graduate School of Nursing (GSN) invites applications from qualified candidates to teach in the Graduate Entry Pathway (GEP) program beginning in July 2019. The GEP program prepares students who have a bachelor’s degree or higher outside the field of nursing to become licensed as professional registered nurses (RN) before continuing to either the Doctor of Nursing Practice (DNP) program to pursue a career as a nurse practitioner, the PhD program to be prepared as a nurse-scientist, or the Advanced Generalist Registered Nurse (AGRN) program to receive a master’s degree.

A full-time, 12-month nursing faculty position is open in the GEP program. Faculty with experience teaching Medical/Surgical and/or Psychiatric/Mental-Health Nursing, Pharmacology or Fundamentals are encouraged to apply. The scope of responsibilities include teaching (classroom, health assessment lab, simulation and clinical instruction), advising, and participation in program- and school-related committees and activities.

Successful candidates will have a minimum of a masters’ degree in nursing; doctoral degree in nursing or related area preferred; prior teaching experiences; program of practice and/or scholarship; and eligibility for RN and/or NP licensure in Massachusetts.

Salary and rank commensurate with previous experience. To apply, please visit: http://academicjobsonline.com
