

Updates on Executive Order of January 27, 2017

For the past week there has been tremendous uncertainty and disruption regarding the President's January 27, 2017 Executive Action.

Update:

The Executive Action most directly pertains to citizens (passport holders), nationals (country of birth) and dual nationals (one or more passports) from the following 7 countries: Iran, Syria, Sudan, Iraq, Somalia, Yemen, and Libya.

Specific implications of the Executive Action for these 7 countries include:

- A 90-day travel restriction on entering, or re-entering the United States
- A 90-day suspension of all U.S. consular visa applications
- A 90-day suspension of any new or existing immigration applications for certain immigration benefits filed with U.S. Citizenship & Immigration Services (USCIS) including, but not limited to, Optional Practical Training (OPT), change of status applications, extension of status applications

If you are a national or dual-national of one of these seven countries under UMass Medical School's immigration sponsorship, please contact the ISO before making any plans to travel outside of the United States (including travel to Mexico and Canada).

Clarifications and Updates:

- On February 6, 2017 we can now confirm that U.S. Citizenship & Immigration Services (USCIS) will proceed and not delay any/all immigration applications that have been- or will be- filed, including but not limited to Optional Practical Training (OPT), Change of Status, Extension of Status, etc.: <https://www.uscis.gov/news/alerts/uscis-implementation-jan-27-executive-order>
- On February 4, 2017, a Federal judge in Washington State temporarily blocked the travel ban provisions of the Executive Action and visa holders from these 7 countries (7C) are once again, at least temporarily, permitted to enter the U.S. with a valid visa. The initial 7C travel ban is suspended.
- Also on February 4, 2017, it was confirmed that the U.S. State Department has reversed its earlier "revocation" of all visas for citizens of the 7C for 90-days. This means that any visa (in a passport) belonging to one of the 7C remains valid through the remaining validity date indicated on the visa. To reiterate, as long as you have a valid I-20 form (F-1), a valid DS-2019 form (J-1) or continuing employment (H-1B), your immigration status remains valid and there is absolutely no disruption to your ability to study, work, etc. at UMMS.
- On January 29, 2017 it was confirmed by the White House that nationals or dual-nationals of one of the 7 countries (7C) listed above who are Legal Permanent Residents (LPRs) that currently hold Green Cards have since been allowed to re-enter the United States and are no longer necessarily subject to the 90-day travel ban on a "case-by-case" basis. For anyone not directly sponsored by UMass for permanent residency, the ISO cannot legally advise you. The ISO is however, able to connect you with trusted outside immigration counsel and other available resources. Please contact the ISO, we are very glad to help.

Other recent developments

- Despite some media reports, at the time of this writing there are no additional countries besides the 7C who are subject to the President's Executive Action.
- There have been other "leaked" or previews of other proposed Executive Action, but at this time, there are no existing or planned actions to change the regulations to Optional Practical Training (OPT) or H-1B visas.

Please try to refrain from relying on "information" that you might see or hear from unconfirmed sources on social media or other friends or family members. This website will remain the Medical School's official source of information and guidance for any changes to immigration regulations or policies related to F-1, J-1, H-1B or permanent residency for those under UMMS immigration sponsorship.
