the power
of philanthropy

of leadership

It is our pleasure to present this Annual Report of Donors for the 2011 fiscal year. As with past editions, this publication serves to celebrate the generosity of our donors, as well as showcase the very real impact of their contributions for, and partnership with, UMass Medical School and UMass Memorial Health Care.

As you will see in the dynamic stories presented within these pages, commitments of private funds are vital to the advancement of medical knowledge and education, and the implementation of new methods of health care delivery at our academic health sciences center. Those advancements are what enable us to fulfill our critical and joint mission of advancing the health and well-being of the people in the commonwealth and the world.

The formula for our future success, and that of our entire academic health sciences center, relies on a number of components. Key among those are philanthropy and, more specifically, our generous advocates whose steadfast financial support propels us forward in the fulfillment of our mission.

As public funds become less plentiful, charitable donations become even more essential to our future. The generosity demonstrated by so many clearly signifies a powerful commitment to our work and the communities we serve. It also signifies that philanthropy has the power to inspire future health care practitioners, encourage researchers, enhance care and support those in need.

We are extremely grateful that the philanthropic activities of so many include the important work being conducted here, and we feel privileged to acknowledge the names of those individuals and organizations who provided financial support to UMass Medical School and UMass Memorial Health Care in the last fiscal year. Whether made to the UMass ALS Champion Fund, to cancer research and care, to the Fund-A-Need project during the Winter Ball, to a volunteer program or to a fund supporting patients and families with extraordinary financial needs, all gifts make a difference. On behalf of our united institutions, we humbly thank you for your support.

The power to change the face of medicine

Under a clear blue sky, hundreds of people from the UMass Medical School community strolled onto the green-grass carpet at the edge of the Albert Sherman Center construction site on Wednesday, June 15, 2011, to sign a white steel beam. Then they watched as it was hoisted to the top of the nine-story building, marking the completion of the highest level of the building.

Chancellor Michael F. Collins led the topping off ceremony, paying tribute to Albert “Albie” Sherman, former vice chancellor for university relations, and recognizing many of those involved in the conceptualizing, design and construction of the building. “This is a transformative project,” Chancellor Collins said. “We believe that the research efforts that will be undertaken in this building will yield seminal scientific discoveries that ultimately will lead to pioneering treatments and cures that will benefit all of mankind.”

Scheduled to be completed in late 2012, the Sherman Center will double UMass Medical School’s research capacity and expand its current educational space to support the new learner-centered Medical School curriculum. This interdisciplinary, state-of-the-art research and education facility will foster interaction and collaboration among scientists and promote innovation and synergies across disciplines. In particular, the Advanced Therapeutics Cluster, a major new initiative to be housed in the Sherman Center, will dramatically expand the Medical School’s research efforts and focus some of the best minds in the world on creating new therapies for many debilitating diseases.

When fully operational, the Sherman Center is projected to support 1,600 jobs and $264 million in annual economic activity throughout the commonwealth. More than 100 investigators and their staffs will work in open lab spaces that encourage collaboration and interaction.

“At a time when others must put plans on hold, this dynamic campus boldly prepares for a future where the sparks of innovative research and teaching come together to create a fire of translational discoveries that could change the face of medicine,” said Collins.

The power to fight disease

There is a new champion in the fight against amyotrophic lateral sclerosis (ALS, or Lou Gehrig's disease) and a new fund to support research at UMass Medical School (UMMS), where striking breakthroughs have already been made in understanding this fatal disease.

Former Massachusetts Gov. Paul Cellucci is using his formidable political connections to raise funds for the UMass ALS Champion Fund, an endowment supporting ALS research conducted by Robert H. Brown Jr., DPhil, MD, chair of the Department of Neurology at UMass Medical School, and his colleagues. Gov. Cellucci revealed in early 2011 that he has ALS and is a patient of Dr. Brown.

"I am proud to continue my career in public service by leading the UMass ALS Champion Fund," said Cellucci, who is also a former U.S. ambassador to Canada. "A champion helps to deliver great victories, and Dr. Brown is a true champion of ALS research. But, victories are a team effort and Dr. Brown and his colleagues at UMass Medical School need our support."

The UMass ALS Champion Fund, which was unveiled at Fenway Park in May, is designed to help Brown and his colleagues to pursue ALS research leads and breakthroughs immediately, rather than having to wait to attract funding from traditional sources. As a result, this fund will make researchers at UMMS better prepared to seize the moment when highly promising ALS discoveries are made.

Brown has been a leading visionary for ALS treatment and part of nearly every fundamental ALS breakthrough to date, including the identification of mutations in a gene that is responsible for 20 to 25 percent of the familial form of the disease. Brown's discovery opened a window into ALS that has changed the research landscape profoundly and given people something quite rare in the field of ALS: hope.

ALS is a neurodegenerative disorder that causes progressive muscle weakness, leading to paralysis and eventually death. There is no treatment that does anything but even slightly slow the progression. The research efforts of Brown and his team are allied with UMass Medical School's Nobel Prize-winning research in the field of RNA biology. For more information about the UMass ALS Champion Fund, visit www.umassals.com.

An ongoing partner in the ALS fight

Another champion that has partnered with the Medical School in the fight against ALS is The Angel Fund. Based in Massachusetts, The Angel Fund receives support from many community outreach efforts, including the Sharon Timlin Memorial 5K Race that was established in memory of the mother of former Red Sox pitcher, Mike Timlin. In conjunction with other fundraising events, The Angel Fund has contributed more than $650,000 to UMMS to date, all in support of ALS investigations in Dr. Brown's internationally recognized laboratory, the Cecil B. Day Laboratory for Neuromuscular Research.

Rich Kennedy, president of The Angel Fund, is an ardent advocate for ALS research; he lost both his father and brother to the disease. "I like to consider us as one big family of like-minded individuals who all have shared a great loss," Kennedy said. "That is why we do this, why it is so important to us and why we will never stop until there is a cure for this terrible disease."

The power to support families in need

For parents of a child who has been hospitalized due to a life threatening illness, being with that child as much as possible is their main priority. Dealing with seemingly ordinary issues, such as travel to and from the hospital, parking and meals are often far from their minds. Yet when that hospital stay is long-term, those secondary matters can become burdensome, incurring financial and logistical challenges that can complicate a decidedly stressful time.

Families of children with epilepsy who are patients at UMass Memorial Children's Medical Center or Children's Hospital Boston now have access to financial assistance for those types of expenses through the Tyler Foundation Fund for Extraordinary Needs. Established in June 2010 through a gift from the Tyler Foundation, the fund assists these families in paying for things such as parking and meals.

The Foundation was created by Heather and Erik Plotkin and named for their son Tyler. In 2005, Heather and Erik spent weeks at Tyler's bedside before and after brain surgery that was performed when he was 15 months old to treat a brain malformation that caused epilepsy. Through the support of family and friends, who provided meals and encouragement, Heather and Erik could focus their attentions where they needed to be—with their son.

"We could not have gotten through our ordeal without that support," Heather said, "But we also saw other families who were not as fortunate."

In response to that need, the couple started the Tyler Foundation to assist families of children who are patients at UMass Memorial Children's Medical Center or Children's Hospital Boston, where Tyler had been treated. The Foundation provides meals, gas cards and financial assistance for the purchase of therapeutic equipment. UMass Memorial Children's Medical Center was selected as the recipient of the Fund for Extraordinary Needs because of the care Tyler received there from Paul C. Marshall, MD, chief of pediatric neurology and associate professor of pediatrics and neurology at UMass Medical School.

"It was important for us to show our support for the excellent care provided at UMass Memorial Children's Medical Center," Heather said.

The power to give back

Margaret “Peggy” Bastien understands what it’s like to undergo treatment for breast cancer. She also understands just how much a compassionate gesture, no matter how small, can make that treatment experience more tolerable. That’s why it was important for this former patient of the UMass Memorial Cancer Center of Excellence to give back to the institution that treated her in her time of need.

In fall 2010, Peggy started volunteering at the Cancer Center. She and a host of other volunteers bring snacks, beverages or a warm blanket to patients receiving chemotherapy—small comforts that make a substantial impact. Patients also have access to a nutritious bagged lunch for a nominal fee. However, for patients with financial difficulties, that cost can be beyond their means. So that those patients could have access to that lunch at no cost, Peggy and her family made a generous monetary donation to the Cancer Center.

“These patients, their families and friends are going through one of the worst times of their lives,” said Peggy. “Something simple like a free lunch can mean so much.”

Peggy’s compassion for others extends beyond her support of the Cancer Center. For the past decade she has asked family and friends who attend her annual Christmas party to bring toys to be donated to the UMass Memorial Children’s Medical Center—a holiday tradition that has benefited many young patients.

“People always brought hostess gifts. They were always appreciated, but really... How many candles and bottles of wine can you use?” she said. After connecting with Rob Wing, director of the Child Life Program at UMass Memorial Children’s Medical Center, Peggy would compile a list of needed toys, which she included with her party invitations.

Although she has given so much to so many, Peggy feels that she has received much more in return. “The staff members, volunteers and the patients are some of the best people I have ever met. Their caring and their courage are remarkable,” she said. “What they give to me is so much more than what I do for them.”

The power to support education

Being able to afford a quality medical education can be daunting, particularly for students who are economically disadvantaged. Without scholarship assistance, the dream of becoming a physician would be impossible for many. Because of a major gift from UMass Medical School (UMMS) graduate Nicholas Tsanotelis, MD, and his wife Regina, UMMS students with financial challenges will be better able to pursue their careers in medicine.

Through the Nicholas M. Tsanotelis, MD '82 and Regina M. Tsanotelis Scholarship Fund, the Tsanotelises are helping to provide students with a world-class medical education that is financially within their reach. Since graduating from the Medical School, Dr. Tsanotelis has regularly given back, "starting with small donations," he said. Explaining his motivation for giving, he noted that even though the difference in price between UMMS and private schools is "astronomical," the cost is still a struggle for some students.

Although it was established by the legislature as the commonwealth's first and only public medical school, UMMS receives less than 4 percent of its operating budget from the state. As a result, the generous support of alumni and friends plays a significant role in enabling the Medical School to fulfill its mission. In fact, during the past 27 years, the University of Massachusetts Medical School Alumni Association has awarded more than $659,000 in scholarships and loans to deserving Medical School students.

Tsanotelis is quite familiar with the economic challenges of paying for college and medical school. The son of a hard-working, immigrant father who was unable to attend college, Tsanotelis offset some of the expense of his undergraduate education at Boston College by living with his parents and commuting.

"For me to go to college and medical school was a very big deal," said Tsanotelis, who now practices internal medicine in Whitman, Mass. "I was so grateful for the opportunity and I was very fortunate to get into UMass Medical School."

The power to change lives and the course of research

If you asked UMass Medicine Development Council Chair Mary C. DeFeudis whether or not philanthropy makes a real difference, she wouldn't hesitate to say yes. "Without it, research that won the Nobel Prize may never have happened," she said. "For researchers to be innovative and to think outside the box, they really need that financial support."

DeFeudis has long worked actively with UMass Medical School and UMass Memorial Health Care leadership to raise money for research and care programs, and has furnished her own leadership gifts that benefit cancer research and promote children's health. In 2010, she further broadened her support with a gift that benefited the UMass Memorial Cancer Center of Excellence and established the Mary C. DeFeudis Chair in Cancer Care and Research at UMass Medical School. In doing so, DeFeudis is extending her consistent support of biomedical research and patient care beyond community borders by focusing on a devastating illness whose effects reach far and wide.

"I feel fortunate to be able to offer my support," said DeFeudis. "I feel a cure for cancer is within our reach, but it is dependent upon funds for research." Michael L. Blute, MD, an internationally recognized figure in the treatment of urological cancer who joined UMass Memorial in 2009 as the director of the Cancer Center of Excellence, noted that DeFeudis' philanthropy "will support our continuing efforts to advance clinical science and realize improved patient outcomes, and bring cancer care to the next level." Dr. Blute was invested as the first Mary C. DeFeudis Chair in Cancer Care and Research at UMass Medical School's Investiture ceremony on September 15, 2010.

For DeFeudis, philanthropy is very personal. "If it touches me, I go forward and do not look back," she said. "I have tons of energy. I like being able to get out there and help people and make a difference in the world."

Philanthropy is just one component of the extensive community involvement this Worcester-area native finds so personally rewarding. DeFeudis also directs considerable time and energy—as well as money—to all corners of the city, from the theater and sports arena to schools and hospitals.

Gifts such as DeFeudis' that benefit the Cancer Center support its transdisciplinary approach to cancer care, which has teams of cancer specialists working in the same facility where scientists and clinical investigators conduct research. As an endowment to the Medical School, they increase the School's ability to attract and retain individuals distinguished in their fields. Named professorships also provide an opportunity for donors to contribute to the enrichment of the academic and scientific environment.

The power to enhance family-centered care

From the moment of birth, parents look forward to bringing the newest member of their family home. However, if that child is born prematurely or experienced complications during or after delivery, admittance to a neonatal intensive care unit may be needed. Featuring specialized equipment and a team of experts who customize care around each baby's specific needs, these homes away from home provide an optimal environment in which these tiny patients can thrive.

In 2010, a substantial redesign of the UMass Memorial Newborn Intensive Care Unit (NICU) was completed. This capital improvement project kicked off in 2009 with a $1 million gift from an anonymous donor and was supported by funds raised through the annual Tee Up for Tots golf tournament, which is dedicated to raising money for the UMass Memorial NICU.

Changes to the space, which were made within the existing footprint of the unit, include the addition of six beds, bringing the total to 49, and two private rooms. The private rooms include a bed for family members so that they can remain with their baby day and night.

In keeping with the NICU's philosophy of family-centered care, where family members are an integral part of their child's care team, the overall unit now features soft lighting and muted colors. Noises are also minimized in an effort to create an environment that is as calm as possible. These improvements reduce external stimuli that can be stressors for newborns and provide the privacy that is sometimes necessary for families and physicians to manage the most difficult conditions.

"Current thinking on NICU design is moving toward the creation of all private rooms to increase individualized environmental control in terms of noise and light sensitivity," said Francis Bednarek, MD, chief of neonatology at UMass Memorial Children's Medical Center, director of the Neonatal Fellowship Program and professor of pediatrics at UMass Medical School. "The private space also promotes parent and child bonding, which is critical."

The alterations to the unit also enable physicians to perform more surgical procedures within the NICU itself, minimizing movement of the child from one environment to another. This approach to newborn care has earned the UMass Memorial NICU benchmark status by the international Vermont Oxford Group, making it a model for other hospital NICUs throughout the world. It is the region's only Level III NICU for high-risk obstetrical and neonatal care—the highest rating given. The UMass Memorial NICU is also a training site for residents, neonatal fellows, nurse practitioners and medical students.

the power to enhance care

Welcome to the Neonatal Intensive Care Unit

For 30 years, Anne Marie and Michael Curtis have been enthusiastic and consistent supporters of UMass Memorial Children's Medical Center. P.L. Rider, their medical supply distribution company, has sponsored the Tee Up for Tots golf tournament since its inception in 1992 as well as the Children's Medical Center Starlight Celebration. "We were motivated by the need to care for the most vulnerable in our community: babies and children," said Michael. Support from P.L. Rider and others have enabled the UMass Memorial NICU to support new programs, purchase equipment and augment its space. The Curtises' commitment to philanthropy is a family affair, extending to their children and grandchildren, shown here touring the redesigned UMass Memorial NICU.

A celebration that effects meaningful change

The power of generosity was unmistakable on the evening of Dec. 10, 2010, when members of the Central Massachusetts community gathered for the second annual University of Massachusetts Medical School and UMass Memorial Medical Center Winter Ball, the area's largest volunteer-driven fundraiser. The gala, held at Mechanics Hall in Worcester, brought together more than 340 guests to celebrate and raise funds to support the shared mission of UMass Medical School and UMass Memorial Medical Center: to advance the health and well-being of the people in the commonwealth and the world.

It was a night of giving that far exceeded previous fundraising events. Money raised was matched for a second year by the Wayne and Gladys Valley Foundation of California to support staffing and programs in the Ambulatory Care Center, which opened in the fall of 2010. Part of the excitement during the auction was fueled by the generosity shown for the Fund-A-Need project—a dedicated breast computed tomography (CT) system, which is a state-of-the-art research tool that allows researchers to conduct advanced clinical trials onsite with the hope of improving the diagnosis of breast cancer.

“We are so grateful for the community’s recognition and support of all that UMass Medical School and UMass Memorial do, locally and globally,” said David Brunelle who, with his wife Jodi, partnered with Michael and Dorothy Tsotsis as co-chairs of the event. Both couples also co-chaired the third annual Winter Ball on Friday, December 9, 2011.

The power of collaboration

A seven-story, 258,000-square-foot patient care and research facility shared by UMass Medical School and UMass Memorial Health Care, the Ambulatory Care Center (ACC) unites patient care and medical research teams in an effort to accelerate the translation of research discoveries into new and more effective treatments. In 2009, the Wayne and Gladys Valley Foundation of California awarded a $12.5 million challenge grant to the academic health sciences center to support capital and programmatic initiatives within the ACC. The funds raised at both 2010 and 2009 Winter Ball galas were matched by this grant.

“The support of the Wayne and Gladys Valley Foundation has been invaluable in helping UMass Medicine establish its clinical and translational science programs,” said Lou Messina, MD, chief of vascular surgery in the UMass Memorial Health Care Cardiovascular Center of Excellence, who was instrumental in helping develop the relationship with the Valley Foundation. “They recognized the substantial potential in UMass’ concept of co-locating clinical research and clinical care and structured their support to create opportunities to expand greatly our own philanthropic program as well. That we were able to meet their grant requirements a year ahead of schedule because of the shared donor enthusiasm for this important clinical and translational science program truly exemplifies the power of philanthropy.”

The Wayne and Gladys Valley Foundation was formed in 1977 by F. Wayne Valley and his wife Gladys to provide financial assistance for various charitable organizations of particular interest to them. The Foundation has made grants only to organizations and projects that strive for excellence and carry out their programs in a well-managed and cost-efficient manner, with clearly defined and achievable goals.

A collaborative effort between the Medical School and UMass Memorial, the ACC was designed to allow physicians, nurses, researchers and other members of the care team to work collaboratively under one roof, combining their varied and broad expertise for the benefit of patients who require seamlessly coordinated care among specialists. All four UMass Memorial Health Care Centers of Excellence—Musculoskeletal, Diabetes, Cancer, and Heart and Vascular—reside in the ACC.

The ACC anchors the southern side of the quadrangle at the University Campus in Worcester.

The power to improve diagnosis

As many women can attest, mammograms can be tremendously painful. However, breast cancer continues to be a devastating disease so early detection is vital. When Barbara “Babs” Donahue learned that UMass Medical School sought to purchase an experimental dedicated breast computed tomography (CT) machine to undertake clinical trials, she jumped at the chance to help.

“If this machine can help reduce the frequency of mammograms and provide more detailed, accurate readings of the breast, I want to help make that happen,” said Babs who, with her late husband, decided that her charitable giving “must be very specific and targeted, and it must save or change lives for the better.”

UMass Medical School is one of only five institutions in the country investigating new techniques for producing three-dimensional images of breast cancer tissue using dedicated breast CT. In addition to eliminating the uncomfortable compression from mammography, this new technology has the potential to increase the rate of detection of breast cancer, decrease false positive results and improve treatment strategies.

Stephen J. Glick, PhD, professor of radiology, and his colleague Andrew Karellas, PhD, professor of radiology, have received more than $3 million in National Institutes of Health funding to investigate the feasibility of a dedicated breast CT system, which takes low-dose images from multiple points of view through breast tissue. These images are combined to produce a 3D illustration of the breast that provides radiologists a better diagnostic tool for identifying potentially cancerous lesions. “These images provide us with exquisite detail of the tissue anatomy that we would otherwise not have,” said Dr. Glick. “It could help us identify masses and microcalcifications at an earlier stage when they are most treatable.”

Nearly $165,000 was raised through both the Fund-A-Need segment of the live auction at the Winter Ball gala in December 2010 and from Pink—Lighting the Way to a Cure, the annual breast cancer event held in October that year, which included a generous contribution from the William J. McKee Foundation.

When Babs learned that nearly half of the $500,000 required to purchase the equipment and set up a room in the Ambulatory Care Center had been raised, she decided to help close the gap with a substantial gift. “I want this machine ordered as soon as possible so the researchers can begin the clinical trials.”
