

Staff Psychiatrists

Dr. Xiaoduo Fan (Director) is a board-certified psychiatrist, and an Associate Professor of Psychiatry in the UMass Department of Psychiatry and the UMass Memorial Health Care System. He is also Director of the Psychotic Disorders Clinical and Research Program at UMass. Before joining UMass, Dr. Fan directed the Asian Mental Health Clinic at Massachusetts General Hospital and for seven years was a member of the faculty at Harvard Medical School.

Dr. Amy Harrington is a clinician and a researcher specializing in the treatment of patients who have both schizophrenia and co-occurring addictive disorders. She is an Assistant Professor of Psychiatry at UMass. Dr. Harrington's research interests are in both the pharmacologic treatment as well as systems-based treatment for patients with co-occurring disorders. Some of her current projects include clinical trials investigating pharmacologic interventions for alcohol use and cannabis use in patients with schizophrenia.

Our Research Program

The Psychotic Disorders Research Program aims to elucidate the etiology of each facet of the triple jeopardy (devastating mental illness, medical co-morbidity, and substance use), and possibly shared pathophysiological pathways and mechanisms among these three conditions. The goal of our research is to develop innovative intervention strategies to treat schizophrenia symptoms, metabolic problems and substance use, and ultimately to improve the quality of life in this patient population
